Subject: Fwd: Guardian article - employee breach?

Hi again - further to Dr Newman's allegations in today's Guardian, would he be in breach of his contract by sharing CSIRO emails: (excerpt form the Guardian)

"But Newman said CSIRO actively pitched to beer companies and conducted market research to aid the rollout of an alcohol product. Guardian Australia has seen emails from Newman CSIRO's Consultative Committee, asking "how to justify our research supporting the alcohol industry to the public".

"I have personally received emails strongly endorsing attendance at such conferences, as have virtually all staff in the CSIRO agriculture and food division," Newman said. "Again, these encouragements are hardly hidden"

... something for next week perhaps?

Cheers

Thanks Kashmi - I appreciate the heads up - I was aware Huw had been talking with the journo on this over the past couple of days. I think no more needs to be added to what Huw has already said.

Cheers Helen

Hey Helen - happy Easter! please see below re: the guardian article that has been published and making the rounds online

There haven't been many responses on Twitter about it. Just a lot of accounts and journalists promoting the article.

Cheers,
Kashmi

Hey guys - happy easter!

This article has just popped up in our Twitter mentions. Ex-CSIRO employee saying we support pro-alcohol research. Huw's in it.

<https://www.theguardian.com/australia-news/2019/apr/19/exclusive-former-csiro-researcher-accuses-science-agency-of-pro-alcohol-research>

Will monitor as much as I can to see if there's anything from it online.

Cheers,
Kashmi
